

Narration

The first day at school begins with sunshine, fresh notebooks, and a tiny flutter of nerves. The dedication says: First day at school.

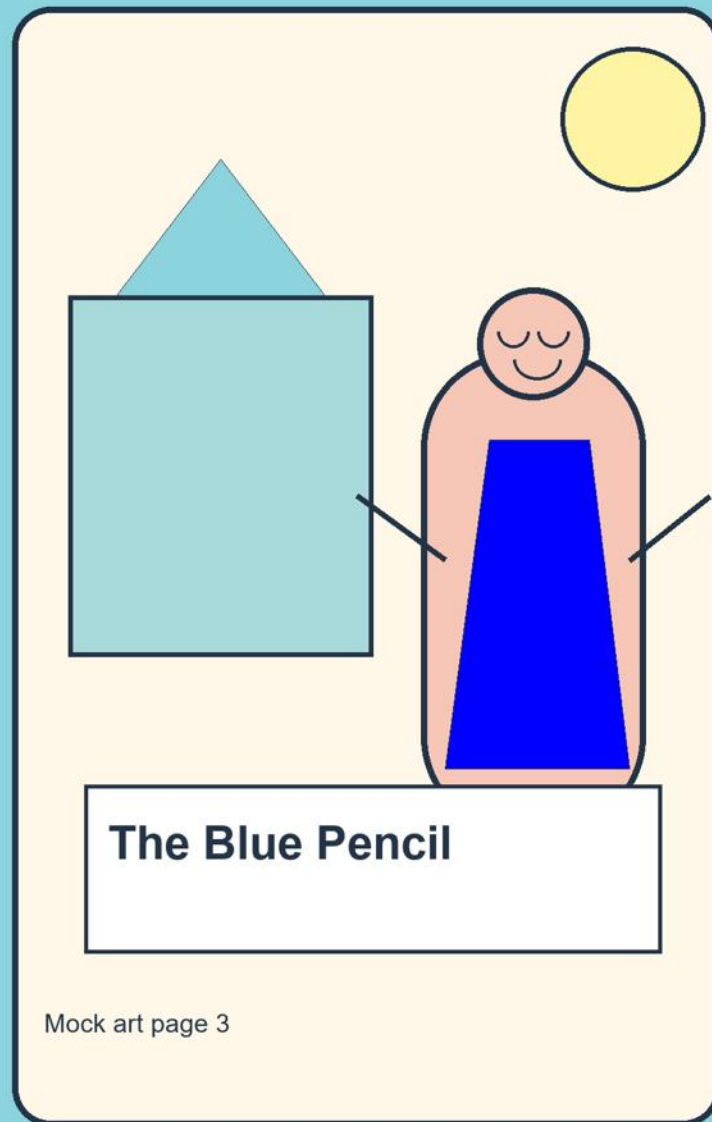

DST: I can do this.

Narration

The classroom feels big at first, but DST notices crayons, books, and a seat waiting warmly.

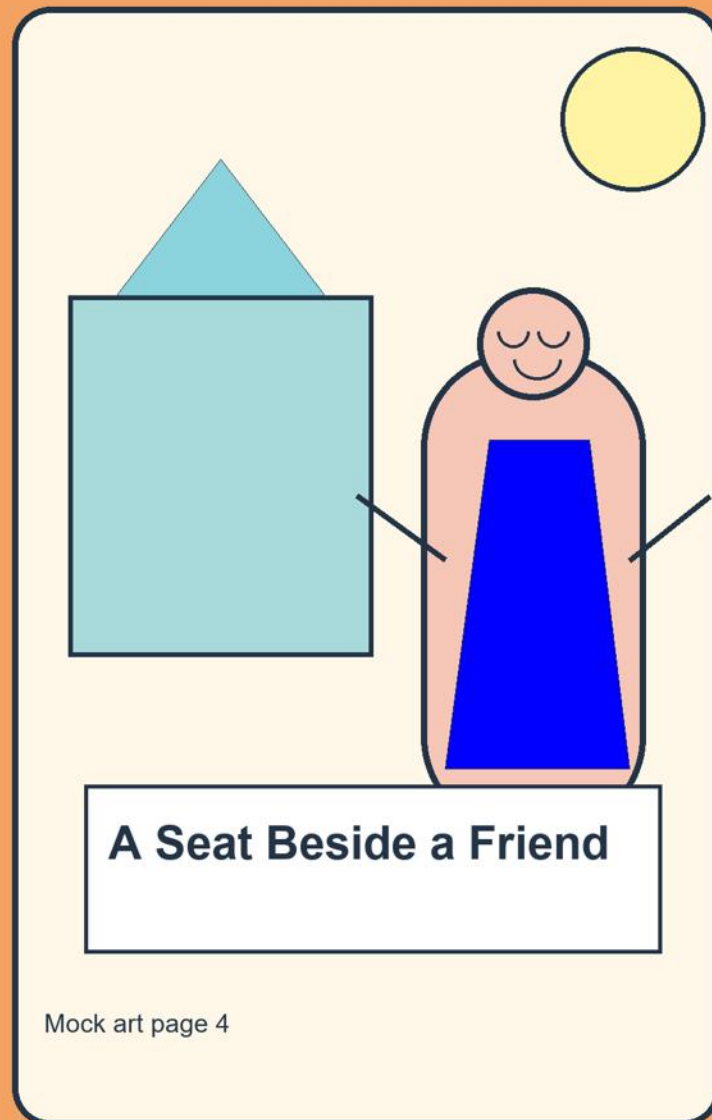

Teacher: Welcome. We are glad you are here.

Narration

When art time starts, DST draws a little map from home to school, adding a bright blue star.

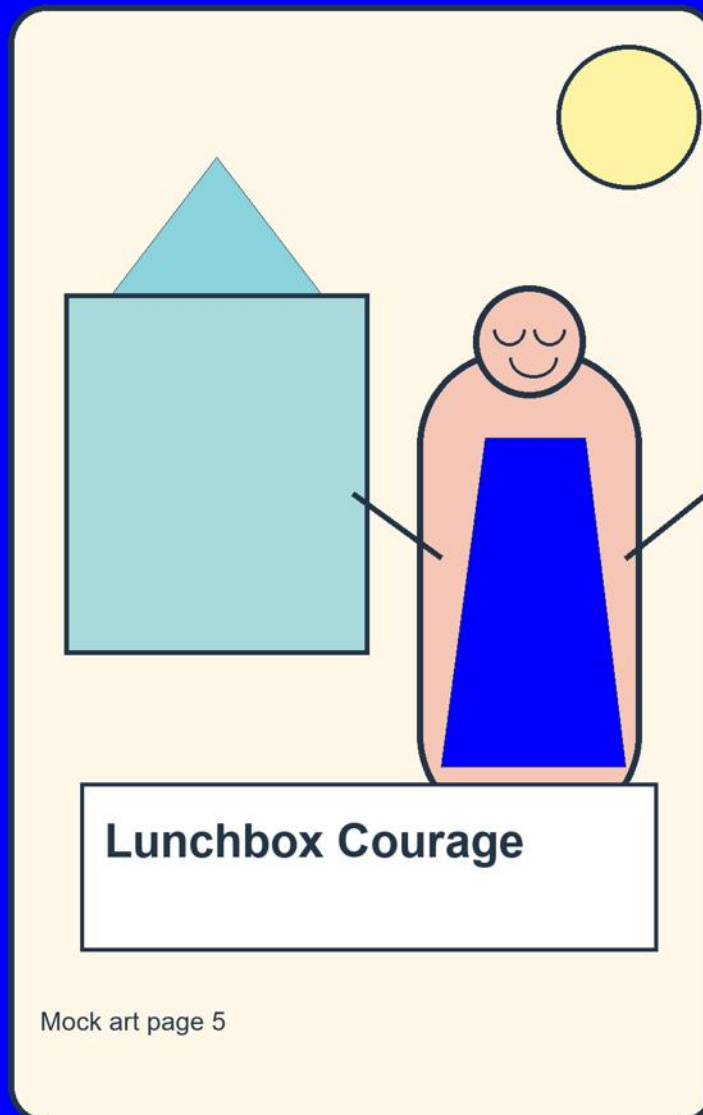

DST: This color feels lucky.

Narration

One friendly question makes the room feel smaller. DST learns a name, shares a smile, and joins in.

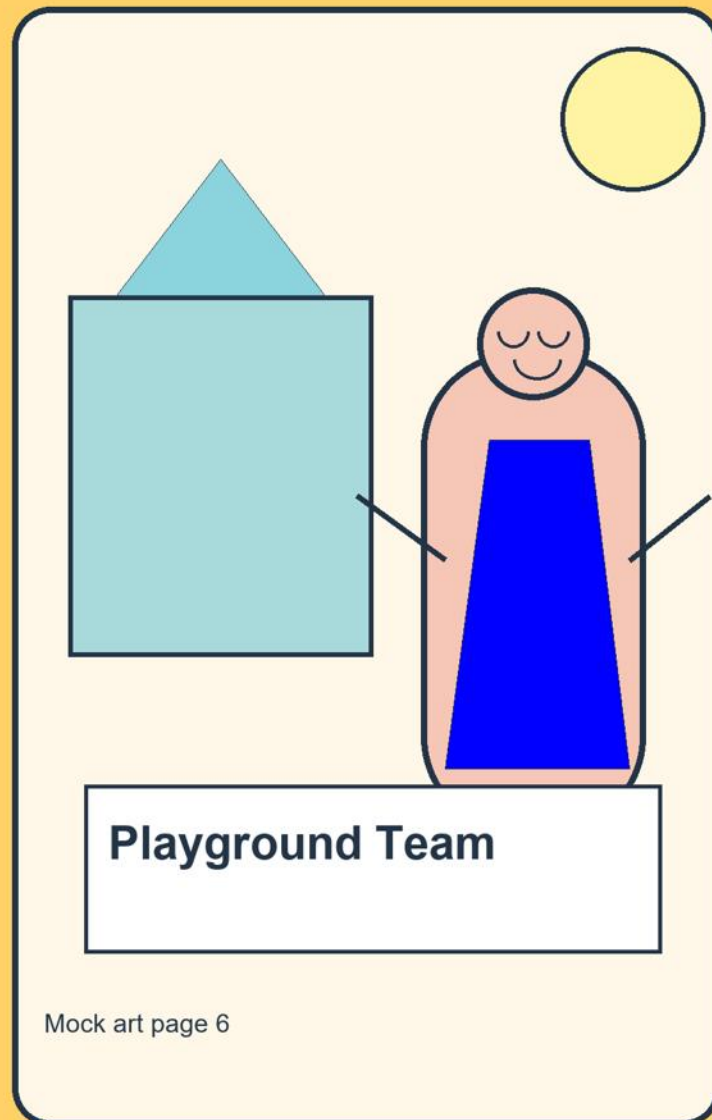

Classmate: Want to be partners?

Narration

At lunch, stories bounce around the table. The first-day flutter becomes a laugh that feels easy.

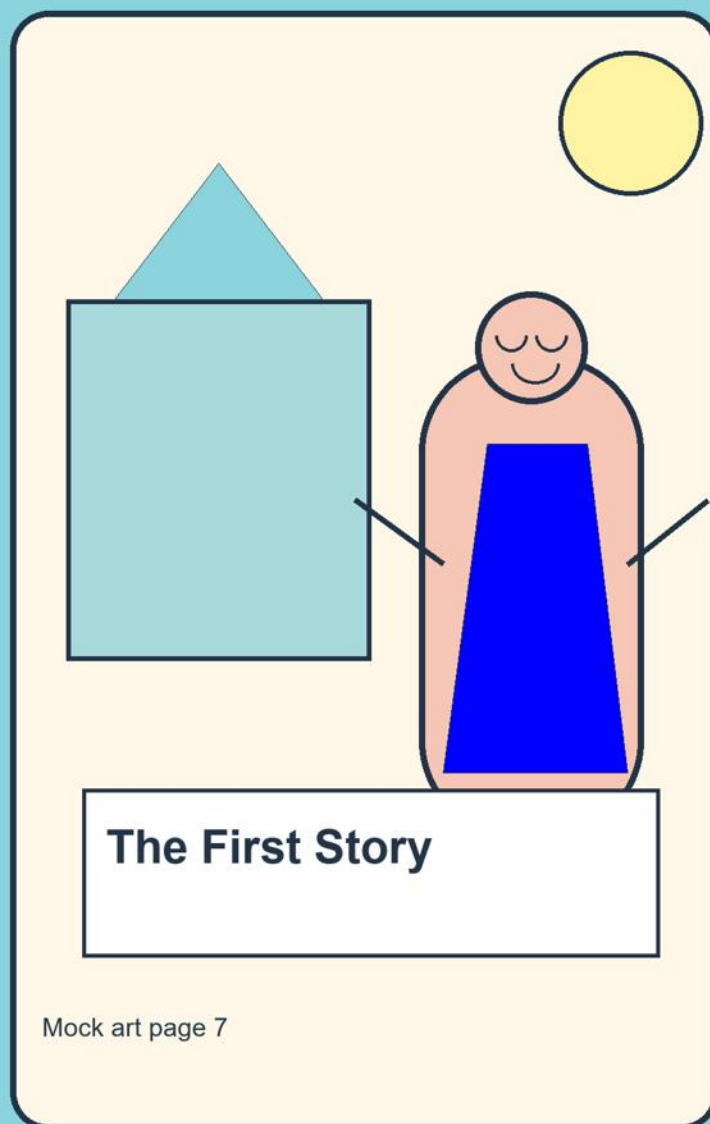

DST: I saved the best bite for last.

Narration

Outside, the game grows better when everyone has a place. Taking turns becomes its own kind of teamwork.

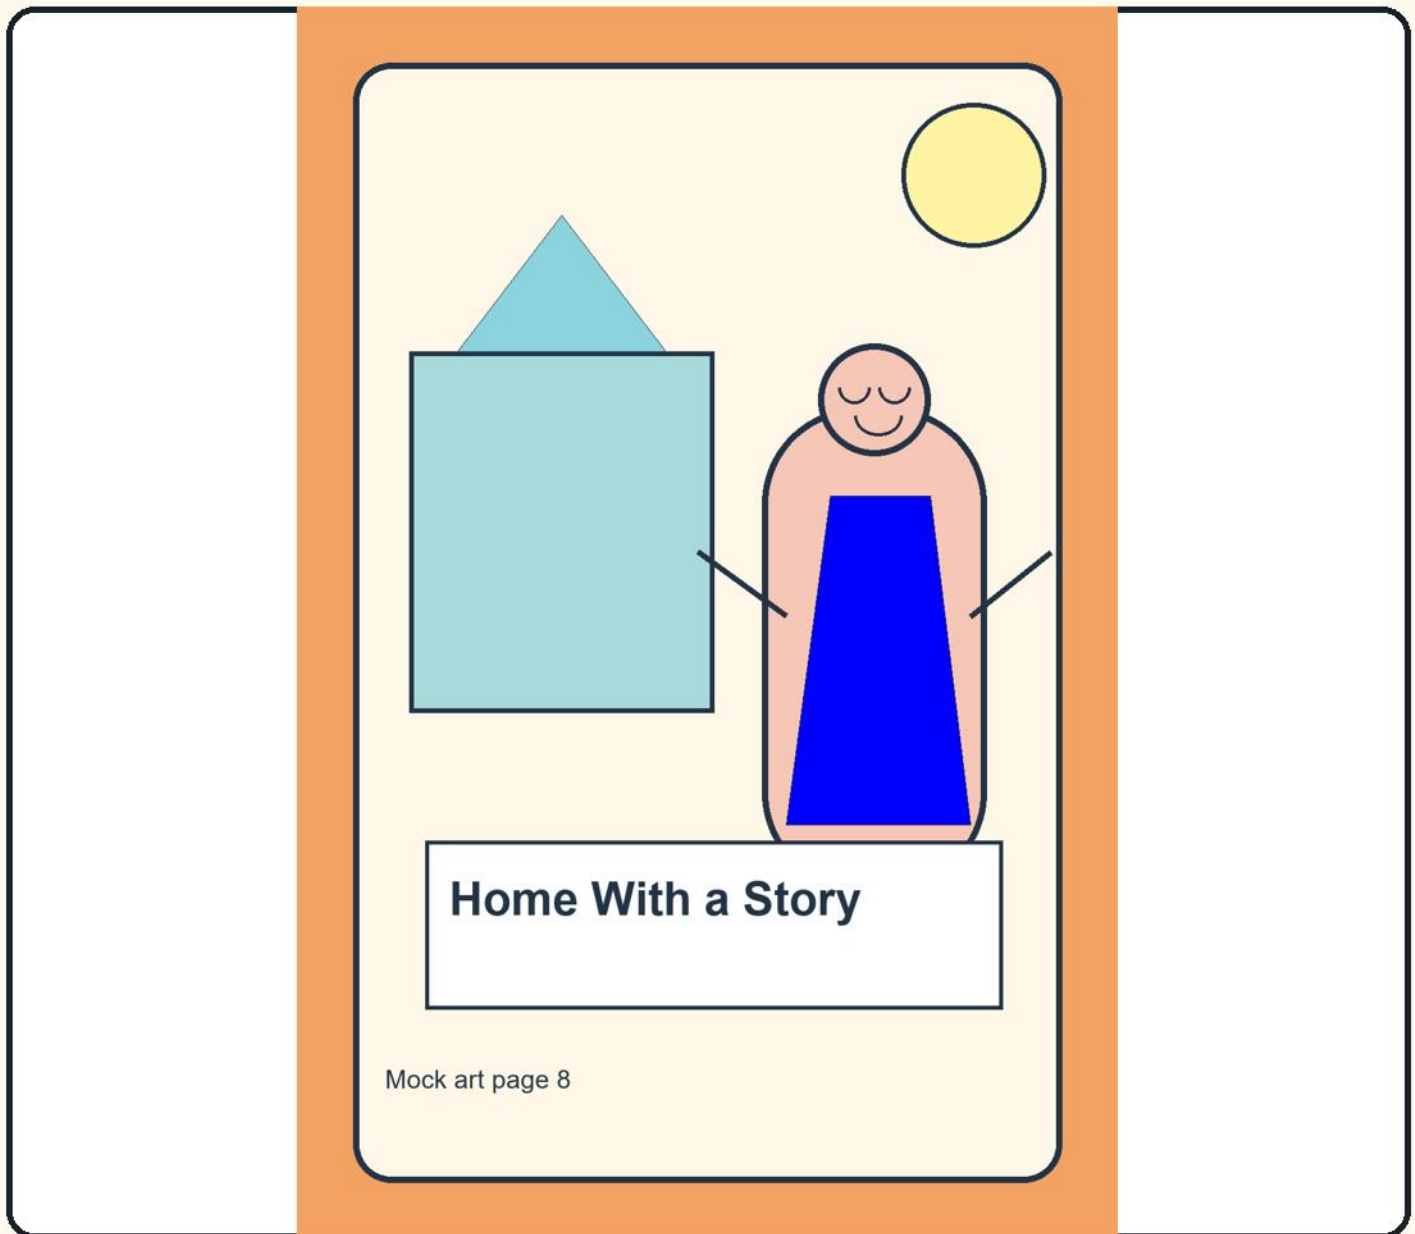

DST: Let's make room for everybody.

Narration

During story time, courage sounds like one clear sentence. The room listens, and the words come out strong.

DST: Today, I tried something new.

Narration

At the end of the day, school no longer feels unknown. DST carries home a happy first-day memory.

DST: I can't wait to tell everyone.
